To Whom It May Concern:

I have known Brycen Davis since I arrived at the school in fall of 2015. It soon became clear that he was one of those key people that you turn to when you have questions or are looking for fresh ideas. Brycen sees problems as opportunities and can quickly envision different ways to tackle any issue. He spends endless hours beyond the school day analyzing and developing solutions for both IT and non-IT related matters.

Brycen supports our school as a member of the faculty council, coach and in IT leadership. Outside of the school he has helped create local networks to bring together IT educators across Istanbul, and in the CEESA region he has helped to organize job-alike sessions. His boundless energy has led him to create an extensive network of collegial relationships both in and outside of the school.

Since I arrived I have been Brycen's direct supervisor. Before entering school administration, I worked for 10 years as an IT teacher and Director of IT. Brycen is knowledgeable of both the impact of IT in the classroom and the tools and resources needed on the back-end to create a seamless experience for users. He coaches our teachers one-on-one as well as leading group training sessions. He also helps to supervise our tech support and works with our network manager to make sure our policies and resources are adequate for the needs of our students, staff and support staff.

I wish Brycen luck in the future and any school that employs him will be fortunate. His time here at IICS has been productive and his energy will be missed. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you would like more information on Brycen's skills or what he might be able to bring to your school.

Sincerely,

Tracy Arnold
